Edward J. Mason : Dick Barton - Special Agent! (BBC Radio Crimes) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Dick Barton - Special Agent! (BBC Radio Crimes):

Captain Richard Barton, late of the Commandos, made his radio debut on the Light Programme in 1946 and quickly went on to become Britain's most popular hero. For years the nation tuned in to hear the famous signature tune, Devil's Gallop, herald another cliff-hanging adventure for the smooth, crime-busting Barton and his friends Snowey and Jock. In 1972, as part of the BBC's Golden Jubilee celebrations, the team came together once more to re-record the very first adventure. The episodes were not stored in the BBC Archives but, thanks to private tapes, these "lost" recordings can be heard once more. And here they are, in this fast-moving story about a stolen secret weapon, complete with dark caves, deadly spiders, lifts with no floors and most intriguingly a tall and mysterious man in a black Homburg. . . Guaranteed to have Barton fans, old and new, on the edge of their seats. 2 CDs. 2 hrs 19 mins.

About the Author Norman Collins was the Head of the Light Program who conceived of the idea for Dick Barton. The series was written by Edward J. Mason and Geoffrey Webb. They later went on to write The Archers, which was to displace Dick Barton on the Light Program.
