I will also upload a few pages in photos to show how the book is put together. I own and really like both of the prior Kinkade coloring books but this one has to be my favorite. I am a fan both of his artwork and of Disney in general, so this book combines two of my favorites things. On top of that, I really like the way that illustrators interpreted the designs in this coloring book. Where the first two books had very sketch-like designs, in this book, much of the design is done is straight-forward line drawing. It will be much easier to color because of it. I find that I like the drawings in this book much more than the most recent Disney coloring books. Many of my favorite classic movies are included and there are also many of the newer sequel film characters included as well. The first thing I did after looking through this book was to go back on-line and order more copies to give away as gifts this holiday season. I know that they will be a big hit among my family and friends. This is the third Thomas Kinkade coloring book in this series and the first one to feature his Disney artwork. The books are published by Posh and follow the same format. The size of the book is the same as is the texture of the paper. The paper in this book is soft white. The designs are printed on the right hand side of with the color photo of the actual painting on the left hand side (i.e., opposite each other in the book.) This will allow me to look at the photo of the real painting while I am coloring my own. Certain coloring medium will bleed through and can ruin the colored designs (see below.) I purchased a second copy to keep the photos pristine as I work with alcohol-based markers most of the time. Here is what I experienced while coloring in this book and testing the paper with my medium:

63 Thomas Kinkade Disney designs with 63 color photos as well. Designs printed on one side of the page with a photo on the back of the page. Paper is soft white, very slightly rough, non-perforated and medium weight. Designs stop before the binding area but unfinished elements are left on all four sides of the design which does not have a framing line. Glue Bound Pages can be cut out without loss of designs. I don't plan to do so as I want to keep the continuity of the colored picture and design together. Alcohol-based markers bleed through the paper. Water-based markers leave shadows of color (with some spotting through) on the back of the page except for the brush end of dual-end Tombow markers which did not leak through. India ink pens leave shadows of color on the back of the page. Gel pens do not bleed through. Colored pencils work well with this paper. I tested both oil and wax based pencils and was able to get good results from both. I got good pigment (especially with multiple layers of the same color.) I was able to layer different colors and to blend easily using a blending stick. If you decide to use markers, you will probably have some amount of bleed-through onto the back of the page. I recommend using a heavyweight sheet of paper or card stock below your working page. That will keep ink from damaging the next design below.

By Tech Insider[[VIDEOID:27b587252e99de50092273bd6b2864e7]] This book is not what I typically buy for coloring. I prefer graphic lines, small details. But this book took my attention because as a child, I was a big fan of Disney movies and cartoons and even now, I always watch them with my daughter. I'm not an artist and when I opened this book, I felt challenged. Especially where I had to color the sky or where the morning sun threw its rays on the castle or stairs and they became partially soft pink. The book is constructed in a way, where the coloring page is on the right and the colorful picture (which was my guide and helped me a lot) is on the left. I used Prismacolor pencils, which worked amazingly for this coloring book, as I could blend them easily and I liked the result. Although the paper is pretty thick, I wouldn't use gel pens, as not only they might bleed on the other page, but also a lot of coloring parts would be impossible to color, using just gel pens. There are a lot of famous scenes from all time favorite Disney cartoons: "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", "The Little Mermaid", "Beauty and the Beast", "Alice in Wonderland", "Sleeping Beauty" and many other. The pictures are very classy and I would say old-fashioned, just like from the cartoons I remember from my childhood. Usually, I have time for coloring when my daughter is having her afternoon nap and when she wakes up, she loves to look at my drawings and she tries to recreate them in the own way.
