By papersticker I wasn't really impressed with the book. It seemed top-heavy with tons of anecdotal stories about people's experiences with the sixth sense, and over-sells the sixth sense (IMHO) to the detriment of the other 5 senses. ; and only a little nuts and bolts of the actual process of achieving goals. What really helped me much more were the writings of W.Clement Stone (The Success System That Never Fails) also Napoleon Hill's "Think Grow Rich". They cover the same material in Magic of Believing; but add so much more MUCH better organization of the material.
