From Austrian Film Museum : Michael Pilz [German Language Edition]: Auge Kamera Herz (Filmmuseumsynemapublikationen) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Michael Pilz [German Language Edition]: Auge Kamera Herz (Filmmuseumsynemapublikationen):

Born in a small town in Lower Austria, Michael Pilz has realized over 100 films since the 1960s. His breakthrough came with a veritable massif central of European documentary cinema: Heaven and Earth (1979-82), an epic work about the Styrian mountain village of St. Anna. Since then, he has been a "solitary man", crossing the borders between film forms just as easily as those between art, cinema, life. This richly illustrated book is the first monograph about Michael Pilz. It includes several essays dealing with his work, an extensive conversation, selected texts and film treatments written by him, and a complete annotated filmography.

An exceptional volume on an exceptional filmmaker whose presence can be felt every step along the way. (Kolik Film magazine) About the Author Olaf Müller (* 1971), based in Cologne/Germany, is an independent film expert, author, curator and European editor of Film Comment. His books include other works in this series, on John Cook, Romuald Karmakar, and Dominik Graf. Michael Omasta (* 1964) is a film historian and the film editor for the Austrian weekly Falter. He has (co-)edited several books, on Peter Lorre, Carl Mayer, Claire Denis, Film Noir, and Alexander Hammid, among others.
