National Lampoons True Facts: At long last, a completely new and unique collection of National Lampoons wacky, true, and amazingly stupid True Facts. Brief Description: Before Jay Leno's Headlines, before the New York Post's Weird but True, there was National Lampoon's TRUE FACTS—hilarious real-life advertisements, stupefying signs, weird wedding announcements, and other completely absurd-but-true samples of real-life funny stuff.

From Publishers Weekly The editor of the National Lampoon and his two accomplices offer a laugh-out-loud reference book with a "believe-or-not" slant. A case of "true leadership" explains how Walt Disney maintained posthumous control over his executives, and "true rehabilitation" reports on how painting a jail's holding room pink led to a decline in fights among inmates. These weird stories are culled from wire service dispatches and newspapers large and small all across the country. Each page is filled with photographs of real but comical signs: "DOG RUN PLEASE"; "SLOW DEATH IN FAMILY"; and "DO NOT PASS WHEN TRAFFIC ONCOMING." Perfect for bathroom browsing or a quick pick-me-up.
