Saw 4 productions of this, including the PBS one with Bill Bixby and Valerie Perinne. Wish it was still put on today. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Perette M.

BarellaVery strange but enjoyable avant-garde play.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. SteambathBy Margaret HendrixHad seen the play on Public TV, so knew how good the story was...it was as good as I remembered.

A parade of unforgettable characters emerge from the steam in this hilarious, supernatural bathhouse. There is Tandy, fresh from teaching art appreciation at the Police Academy; Meredith, whose last memory is buying a micro-miniskirt; Biberman, a karate silver-belt who masquerades as a paraplegic; and the mysterious Puerto Rican janitor given to omniscient musings and manipulating the fate of all mankind. Starring Jason Alexander, Edward Asner, Mary Gross, Gerrit Graham, Arthur Hanket, Paul Mercier, and Sierra Ruben. A L.A. Theatre Works full-cast performance featuring: Jason Alexander, Edward Asner, Gerrit Graham, Mary Gross, Kevin Gudahl, Arthur Hanket, Paul Mercier, Ruben Sierra

From AudioFileIn this engaging 1994 L.A. Theatre Works live performance, Jason Alexander and Mary Gross are perfectly cast as new arrivals to what appears to be purgatory, which just happens to be located in a bathhouse on New York City's Lower East Side. A wonderfully grumpy Ed Asner and an ultra-hip, omnipotent janitor, played by the equally hip Ruben Sierra, are there in the hissing steam to meet them. The entire cast delivers the jokes and asides, as well as the references to New York of the late 1960s, with inspired accents and attitude. The 1970 off-Broadway production gained notoriety for its brief onstage nudity. Recreating that scene should be no problem for devoted audiobook listeners--who already know how to use their imaginations. B.P. AudioFile 2010, Portland, Maine
